Annex: projects description

In Vietnam, BATIK International has been developing projects since 2002 and with the support of a branch office since 2008. The first interventions consisted in taking part in advocacy actions around Corporate Social Responsibility. The branch subsequently implemented several projects around the economic integration of women from ethnic minorities, as well as youths from the Paris region. Lately, the team in Vietnam is mainly implementing two projects:

1. The Phu Nu project since 2014 on the empowerment of internal migrant women workers in two industrial zones in the provinces of Hai Duong and Vinh Phuc. Most of the women are from rural provinces of Vietnam. They represent the main labor force in garment, electronics and car manufacturing factories. These women live in collective housing areas, sometimes with several people in rooms of around ten m². The latter belong to private owners. Realized in partnership with two other organizations (Gret and the Center for Development and Integration or CDI), the project aims at empowering women to improve their living and working conditions by themselves. The project is now entering its third 3-years funding phase by the French Development Agency (Agence Française de Développement, or AFD). In previous years, some housing areas were renovated as well as factories. This was possible thanks to the involvement of women in the consultation process, in particular during the identification of the needs and the propositions of proper solutions to other stakeholders.

   In each housing area, clubs have been created. Clubs’ members meet regularly and these moments constitute spaces for discussion and allow the strengthening of links between the tenants. Each club is represented by a women leader who takes on roles as spokesperson, organizing clubs’ meetings and sharing information to clubs’ members. For each province, a network of women leaders exists. Several strategic areas of intervention have been identified for this phase in order to meet the objective of empowerment and improvement of living and working conditions for women:

   - the empowerment of women by strengthening their capacities so that they can lead by themselves actions to improve their conditions. This component consists mainly of training sessions to strengthen their hard and soft skills, in particular on the organization of collective actions and the autonomy of their network, the Labor Code and gender-based violence. While being supported by the project team, the aim is for women to be fully able to express their needs, to organize themselves accordingly to call on the organizations concerned, to take part in consultations and to monitor the implementation of the agreed solutions;

   - strengthening the stakeholders concerned by the issues of the project so that they can provide an appropriate response to the workers’ needs, especially women. These organizations are the local authorities at the provincial and district levels (Labor Unions including a Legal Aid Center and Women’s Union), businesses, health centers, the Police, etc. The representatives of these organizations will be supported to improve the coordination between them;

   - and advocacy through the involvement of the project team and provincial partners in the reviews of institutional and legal existing frameworks. After several years of implementation, the project has put in place interventions that have led (and will lead) to results that have to be shared with existing advocacy networks, notably via capitalization products. Thanks to the dissemination of these practices, they can then be adopted in other areas of Vietnam.

2. The Hy Vong project which started in 2020 and is carried out in consortium with three other CSOs (Planète Enfants et Développement or PE&D, Center for Studies and Applied Sciences in Gender - Family - Women and Adolescent and Center or CSAGA for Supporting Community Development Initiatives or SCDI). The objective of this 3-years project is to contribute to fight against gender-based violence by providing an effective response. It is carried out in Hanoi and Ho Chi Minh City with a breakdown of activities by locality and CSO depending on their expertise.

To ensure that there is an integrated response acting at each stage of the cycle of violence, the project is based around 4 components divided as follows according to cities and organizations:

In Hanoi for BATIK International and CSAGA:
- Prevention by strengthening the capacities of universities’ students and the authorities present in Hanoi. Students because they will act as change makers, both within their community but also in their future work environment. The authorities because they hold the decision-making influence for the fight against GBV. By better understanding these issues, they will guarantee the evolution of their professional practices by taking gender into account in their actions;
- Advocacy, from the development of an advocacy strategy to the establishment of actions with advocacy networks to feed existing national advocacy. The mobilization will also be done with Vietnamese citizens by the dissemination of messages promoting gender equality (for example, by the organization of cultural events in the intervention cities of the project). The development of communication tools adapted to the messages as well as capitalization will also be key for the dissemination of shareable knowledge.

In Ho Chi Minh City, for PE&D and SCDI:
- Protection through the improvement of existing care systems in collaboration with the organizations concerned, from the identification of victims to their social and economic integration. The idea is to provide immediate and lasting solutions to victims/survivors of violence. Beyond a material support, all of the key stakeholders in this process will be strengthened so that they can provide appropriate support to victims/survivors;
- Strengthening the CSOs of the project team. In fact, each of the partner organizations has its own expertise on the major aspects of the project. In the long term, protection and prevention actions will be realized in other areas. Each organization should therefore be able to learn on the knowledge of others. Thus, several experience sharing sessions will be organized for the project team.
